GB

The rolling landscape of the Karst plateau ends abruptly with limestone cliffs and merges with the flysch hills. The houses of the picturesque village of Črni Kal are clustered at the foot of the steep rocky barrier of the Karst edge that stretches far into the Istria. The sunny limestone walls above the village played an important part in the early days of Slovenian free climbing. Nowadays Črni Kal is a modern and newly equipped climbing area in a pleasant sheltered position, with comfortable flat ground at the foot of the crags and nice surroundings. If you add the wide view of the Gulf of Trieste and the rolling hillside of the Slovenian Istria, you have probably found the main reason for a visit to this charming place. An important novelty for this area are a number of well protected new routes at the right side of the crag. Watch out for loose rock on some of these routes.

The grades, especially in the left and central part of the crag, are a bit lower than those at Osp. It is a nice meeting point for climbing families with children and an attractive alternative to the usually overcrowded walls of Osp.

BEST PERIOD

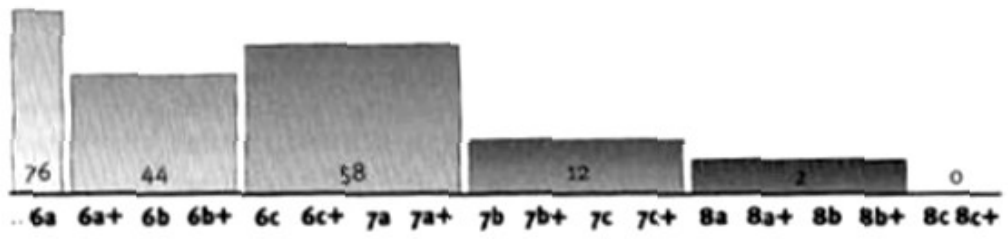

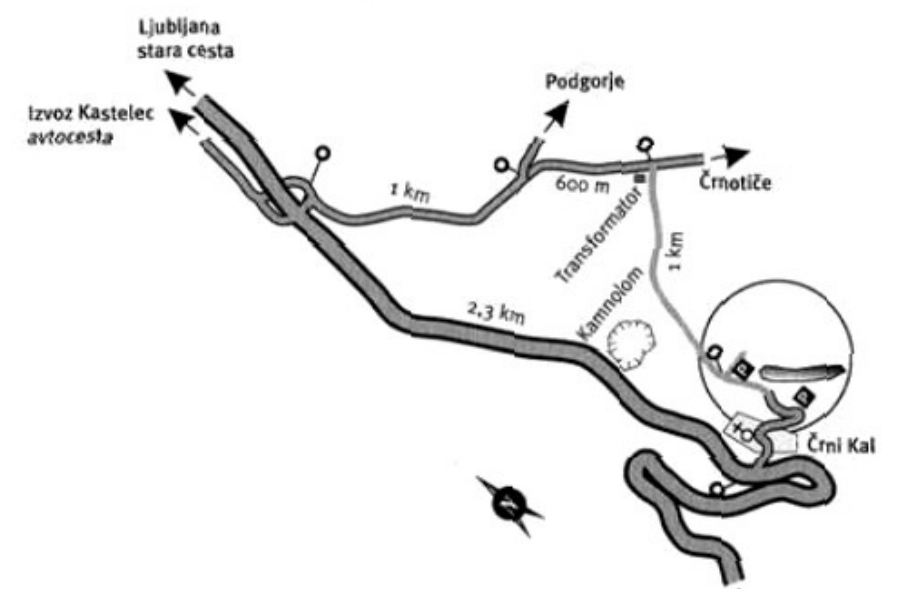

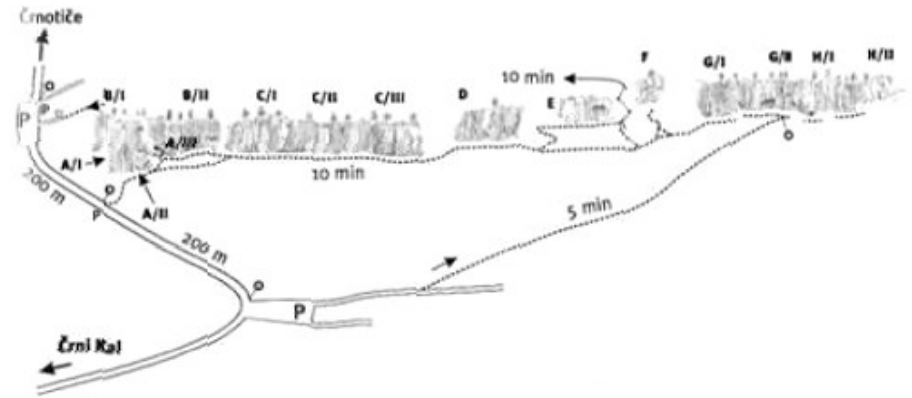

It is possible to climb all year round but the best time to go is autumn through to spring. It is usually too hot in summer, except on the north side of the Turški stolp (A).

CHARACTERISTICS

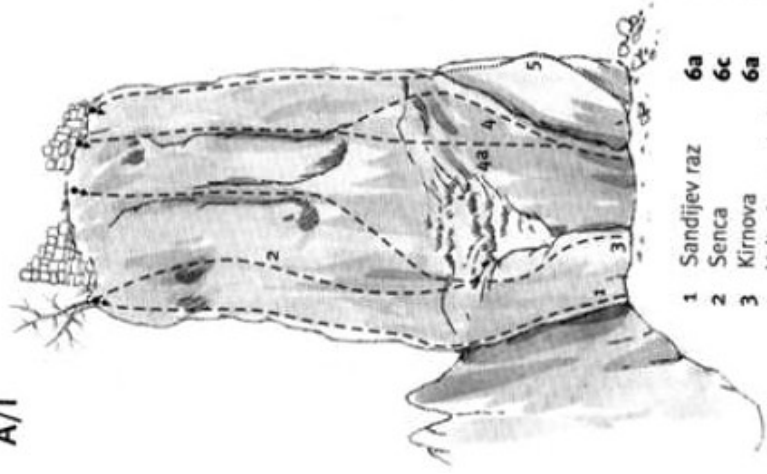

The majority of the routes cross vertical walls on good rock providing very aesthetic climbing. The crag offers a large variety of routes including many of easier grades for beginners and climbing courses as well as those graded in the moderately hard range. All the routes have recently been re-equipped with resin bolts and abseil chains.
